MASU

Auckland - New Zealand

The exciting Japanese robata restaurant and bar located at the SkyCity Grand Hotel. Masu is named after the Japanese symbol for prosperity and good fortune. Masu boxes have been in use for 1300 years and traditionally the square container was used to ration rice when it was a form of currency.

For the Japanese people, the Masu was as valuable and important as the rice it contained and this tradition remains an essential part of their lives. Today, the Masu has become widely used as a vessel for serving sake as well as a symbol of good fortune and abundance. Masu brings atmosphere, passion and a contemporary twist to the traditional robata style of cooking over an open charcoal grill. Housed in what was previously the open foyer and bar space of the Grand Hotel in Federal St. guests are greeted at the huge glass doors and guided gently to where they will be most comfortable. Their philosophy is simple — use fresh local ingredients, enhance the natural flavors of each dish and let the food speak for itself. This pure approach to cuisine is reflected in clean and natural decor. Add to this a lively, informal atmosphere and you have a beautifully bold and dramatically different style of Japanese dining in the heart of Auckland.
